

KALOS

Kalos is made up of three innovative interpreters and composers of Celtic roots music: Eric McDonald, Ryan McKasson and Jeremiah McLane. They are masters of tradition who purposefully explore the dark corners floating on its edges, delivering an alluring musical complexity full of spontaneity and joyful exuberance. Pulling from parallel strands of influence, they create a swirling level of intensity that traverses darkness, light, and everywhere in between. An air of mystery pervades a sound compelling enough to transcend boundaries and appeal to music lovers of all stripes. The music they create is to share, and live performance is the forte. But their mutual attitude stretches beyond the music. They have been good friends ever since they met, and this is present in their live performances, which are full of organic banter and good humor to go along with the music. They create an environment of their own design, drawing in listeners without pretense. Despite living active musical lives thousands of miles apart these musicians have committed to working together to forge a new musical path.

CRITICS ARE SAYING

"The narrative power of McDonald's vocals joins the darker riffs of McKasson's fiddle [and McLane's soulful accordion] for an album with pluck, depth, and good reels aplenty." —

folkradio.co.uk

"There's a certain spontaneity at work as the three musicians alternately contest and duel, combine and coalesce to bring their talents together."—

folkwords.com

"Ryan, Eric and Jeremiah create music together that is at once energetic, sublime, pensive, thought provoking and jubilant." — Steve Behrens, 67
